"LET US HAVE PEACE"

"Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war."
"To the victors belong the spoils."

To our customers belong the profits this week. We have met the enemy and we've got 'em.

WE HAVE SILENCED THE FORTS of high prices with the bargains we sold to the trade. Our figures, at all times the LOWEST, now knock all the rest in the shade.

From our dress goods may yet be selected some choice things in hot weather stuff, on which we won't quote any prices, though others do that for a bluff. These goods you can have as you wish them; yourself make the prices to suit. And when you have spent a few dollars you get a fine picture to boot. We are selling the handsomest DRESS SKIRTS ever sold in this end of the state; for less than the goods can be bought at, all home made and right up to date. Our LADIES WEAR pleases the fairest, and looks lovely on creatures less fair; Our styles, which are ever the latest, and the men folks never forget us, when needing NICE SHIRTS and FINE SHOES. They know we keep the assortment from which they can easily choose.

Our SHOES are the best and cheapest on top of the earth—or below—and every last pair is as "solid" as the rocks in the Forts of Morocco. You may fancy this quite out of reason, but a trial will prove it is true. Just to wind up for the season, FORTY CENTS buys a LOW-QUARTER SHOE.

In GAITERS and BUTTONS and LACES we can fit every foot to a "T." "Cousin George, how dainty your feet look!" "I wear Dorian's shoes—don't you see?"

Rich people are pleased with the beauty of our LINENS, LACE CURTAINS and RUGS, and other folks think it a duty to follow the taste of the rich.

Our trade is increasing and healthy—our prices creating a mass; we build fast the trade of the wealthy, and "the poor we have always with us."

Our PICTURES—the gems of IMMORTALS—in every "sweet home" ought to be, when just for a few dollars' purchase, you're welcome to some of them free.

All will admit the above contains "every truth but poetry."

Everybody come to this winding-up sale of the season.

HOW TO HAVE A CLEAR SKIN FREE FROM PIMPLES.

To be beautiful and have a fair skin, you must have pure blood and good health. To do so, purify the blood and build up the health with the best Tonic and Blood Purifier of the age, Botanic Blood Balm ("B. B. B."). It is the old standard and reliable remedy. It never fails to cure all manner of Blood and Skin diseases, including pimples which are caused by poison in the blood.

POSITIVE PROOF.

A lady friend of mine has for several years been troubled with bumps and pimples on her face and neck, for which she used various cosmetics in order to remove them and beautify and improve the complexion; but these local applications were only temporary, and left her skin in worse condition. I recommended an internal preparation—known as Botanic Blood Balm ("B. B. B.") which I have been using and selling; she used three bottles and all pimples have disappeared; her skin is soft and smooth and her general health much improved. She expresses herself much gratified, and can recommend it to all who are thus affected.

MOUNT VERNON.

How the Home of George Washington Obtained Its Name.

Many of the thousands who visit the home of Washington annually inquire as to the origin of the name, which is not commonly known. At this time, when the United States is at war with Spain, with the sympathy of England, the story of how the place came to be called Mount Vernon is particularly interesting, says the Washington Times.

In 1739, in the war between England and Spain, the colonists in America offered sympathy and support to the mother country. Lawrence Washington, then only 23 and fired with military ardor, raised a company of Virginians, obtained a captain's commission and embarked for the West Indies in 1741 in the command of Gen. Wentworth, who had some 3,000 or 4,000 volunteers. The English commander in the West Indies was Edward Vernon, who had won the rank of rear admiral in the British navy when he was only 21. Vernon and Wentworth undertook a joint expedition against Cartagena, in South America, but they met with failure owing to the effect of the climate on the health of the troops. It is estimated that not less than 20,000 British soldiers and sailors perished in the pestilence. The provincial army was disbanded and Washington came home, Vernon and Wentworth returning to England.

During the months in the south a strong personal friendship was formed between Lawrence Washington and Vernon, and the former was strongly disposed to enter the English army under Vernon. His career was determined, however, by another circumstance. He fell in love with Anna, the eldest daughter of William Fairfax, of the county of that name, and in 1743 they were married and settled on his estate on Hunting creek, inherited from his father. On this highest point he built a plain but substantial house and called it Mount Vernon in honor of his friend. On his death, in 1752, the property went to his only daughter, Jane, for her lifetime, becoming the property of George, the half-brother of Lawrence Washington, on her death, soon after that of her father. The house was not more than a third the size of the present mansion. In 1784 the present building was constructed, the old villa occupying the central part. George Washington was his own architect and drew every plan and specification for the enlarged Mount Vernon.

The English admiral was a man to win the love of a Washington. Some idea of his character may be formed from an incident in his life. When Spanish depredations became intolerable and it was resolved to chastise them, Edward Vernon, then a member of parliament, asserted in the course of a debate that with six ships he could take Puerto Bello, on the Spanish main. The ministry took him at his word, gave him the command of six men-of-war and conferred on him the rank of admiral of the blue. He assaulted the place and in one day captured it with the loss of only seven men. In commemoration of this capture a medal was struck, a copy of which was preserved at Mount Vernon until the death of George Washington.

OCCUPATIONS OF AMERICANS.

Figures Showing the Number Engaged in the Various Classes.

Interesting data about the occupations of the American people is given in the bulletin of the eleventh census recently made public. It shows that the total number of people engaged in occupations of all kinds in 1890 was 23,735,961. Of the whole number of working people the females form 17.22 per cent. Divided by classes the working people of the country are as follows: Agriculture, fisheries and mining, 9,013,386; professional, 244,333; domestic and personal service, 4,360,377; trade and transportation, 3,326,123; manufacturing and mechanical industries, 5,091,293. Considerably more than four-fifths of the illiterate male population of the country and over one-fourth of the illiterate female population are working. Over 59 per cent. of the workmen are married, over 25 per cent. single, over 3 per cent. widowed, and one-quarter of one per cent. divorced. In manufactures and mechanics the carpenters and joiners, numbering 611,482, make up the greatest element, with dressmakers and milliners following with 499,690. There are a little over 1,000,000 bookkeepers, clerks and salesmen, 690,658 merchants and dealers, 5,281,557 farmers, planters and overseers, and 3,004,061 agricultural laborers, 349,692 miners, and only a little over 60,000 fishermen and oystermen. Professors and teachers, aggregating 347,344, form the most numerous of the professional classes. Physicians and surgeons, 104,805, come next; then lawyers, 89,630; clergymen, 88,203; government officials, 79,664; musicians, etc., 62,155; engineers and surveyors, 43,239; artists and art teachers, 22,496; journalists, 21,849, and actors, 9,728.—Mines and Minerals.

TWO GREAT ACTORS.

Their Happy Reminiscent Chats at "Rip Van Winkle's" Home.

"Think of the time, now gone, when Edwin Booth made his annual visits to his dear old friend Joseph Jefferson," writes Josephine Robb, of "Rip Van Winkle as He is at Home," in the Ladies' Home Journal. "Can you not see these two, with all the rest of the family, sitting around the open fire in the big dining-room? These two great artists and dear friends are talking of days that have gone by—one telling the story of some unfortunate predicament in which he had been placed; the other speaking of some day when they had met, and who else was present at the meeting. And then the history of some happy time would be told, and 'Ned, did you ever think?' or 'Joe, will you ever forget?' And so the conversation would go on, and they would be boys again. The light from the bright fire—which was the only light in the room—shows these two faces to perfection. One would tell some old joke and both would laugh merrily—so merrily that all the family, down to the smallest child, joined in. Then the tears would glisten in the eyes of each as the name of some old companion was mentioned—some one whose life had been full of sorrow and who had gone before, perhaps—who knew?—to show them the way. The wonderful profile of Edwin Booth looks as if it were cut in ivory, while the expressive face of Mr. Jefferson changes so continually it would never suggest anything so firm; it is more like wax—but wax with a soul. There came a time when the dear friend was there no more, and none but Mr. Jefferson himself will know how much he has been missed."

A MODEL OF THE EARTH.

Eighty-Four Feet in Diameter—An Object-Lesson in Geography.

The celebrated French geographer, Prof. Elise Reclus, is to lay before the Royal Geographical society particulars of his project for a gigantic model of the earth.

Prof. Reclus' idea is to construct a globe on a scale of eight miles to the inch, this being the smallest sized sphere on which it would be possible to show correct to scale, the depth of every river and the height of every hill on the earth's surface.

This exact replica of the world would measure roughly 84 feet in diameter, or half the size of the dome of St. Paul's. This would mean a distance of 30 feet between New York and London, and Paris and London would be about three feet apart.

The scheme is not exactly a new one, Prof. Reclus having had it in mind for some years, and as a matter of fact, the commune council of Paris had promised a large sum of money toward the construction of such a globe for the Paris exposition of 1900, but unfortunately difficulties arose, and the money was not forthcoming.

The globe would either have to be supported on an axis, in a similar manner to the ordinary wooden globes, or—and this seems likely to prove the most convenient arrangement—floated in an immense bath, so as to be easily turned round.

When Prof. Reclus first made his project public an eminent English scientist suggested that the surface of the earth be molded on the inside instead of the outside of the sphere, so that an observer, suspended in the center of the globe, could easily examine any part of it. This idea, however, did not meet with approval, except that it was suggested that if the globe was given a rotary motion a visit to the interior might prove a permanent cure for delirium tremens. People may be inclined to think that such a globe as described would be of small practical utility. But, apart from its many important scientific uses, it is computed that the thousands of the working classes who would visit such an object would learn more geography in a few minutes' contemplation of the earth's surface than in months spent over maps.—London Mail.

THE COLONEL'S TREAT.

How Two Dragons Obtained a Drink at a High-Toned Bar.

One of the neatest stories of how a military officer can do the right thing without sacrifice of dignity is related of the man who afterwards became commander in chief of the English army. He was sitting in a high-toned taproom of Dublin, where privates were not permitted the privileges of the bar. Two finely-built men of a dragon regiment, wearing long-service stripes, entered and called for drinks, which were curtly refused them. They turned without a word and were retiring in good order. "Halt!" came sharply from the officer in civilian's clothes. From sheer force of habit the soldiers obeyed and faced about.

"I can purchase what I want here, I suppose," said the officer as he advanced to the bar.

"Certainly, sir."

"Then serve these two gentlemen with what they want," and there was a pleasant emphasis on the title "Gentlemen, will you drink with me?"

"With pleasure, sir," and the happy compact was carried out. Then the dragons courteously inquired the name of the gentleman who had thrown out the line, as it were.

"My name is Wolseley—Col. Wolseley," with a smile.

Two pairs of heels went together with a click, two brawny arms went up in salute and the soldiers departed amid the applause of all who had witnessed the scene. There was an officer who looked after the rank and file, and now he is in command of all of them.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The Winged Cupid

Is painted blind. Carrying so much of our coal to the hearts of the people of Paducah has painted him black; but he gets there all the same. Our black St. Bernard mine diamonds are popular with all the ladies of Paducah for furnace heating and cooking purposes. Our Cupid don't carry his bow and arrow—just simply a gentle good, clean, fine quality combustible coal, that shoots its way deservedly into favor.
